BORDER SECURITY AND GUARDING FORCES

The international borders of Assam are guarded by various forces to maintain security and manage cross-border issues:

1. Indo-Bangladesh Border: The Border Security Force (BSF) is responsible for guarding this border. They operate 64 Border Outposts (BOPs) along the border to monitor and control illegal activities and ensure security.

2. Indo-Bhutan Border: The Sashastra Seema Bal (SSB) guards this border, managing 64 BOPs and ensuring the prevention of illegal trade, infiltration, and other security threats.

TRADE WITH NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES

Assam plays a pivotal role in India's trade with Bangladesh and Bhutan. Key points include:

1. Bangladesh: The Assam-Bangladesh border facilitates trade through several land ports such as Sutarkandi in Sribhumi. The trade includes agricultural products, cement, fish, and consumer goods. The reopening of river routes has further enhanced trade, leveraging the Brahmaputra and Barak rivers.

2. Bhutan: Trade with Bhutan primarily includes agricultural products, forest produce, and handicrafts. Bhutan imports food grains, textiles, and other essentials from Assam, while exporting fruits, minerals, and electricity.

STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE OF BORDER RESIDENTS

Residents along the international borders of Assam are crucial for India's security and integrity for several reasons:

1. Security Vigilance: Local populations act as the first line of defense against infiltration and smuggling. Their knowledge of the terrain and local dynamics is invaluable to security forces.

2. Intelligence Gathering: Border residents often provide critical intelligence about suspicious activities and potential security threats.

3. Cultural and Economic Ties: The ethnic and cultural ties between border communities and their counterparts across the border help maintain peaceful and cooperative relations. Economic interdependence also fosters stability.

4. Counterinsurgency: The northeastern region has a history of insurgent activities. Border residents play a key role in counter-insurgency operations by supporting security forces and reporting insurgent movements.

5. Infrastructure Development: The presence of settled populations necessitates infrastructure development, such as roads, healthcare, and education, which also aid in the mobility and operational efficiency of security forces.

6. Trade Facilitation: Local communities engage in legal trade activities, bolstering economic ties and contributing to regional stability and prosperity.

Assam's strategic geographic location, its diverse population, and its extensive international borders with Bangladesh and Bhutan make it a critical area for India's security and economic interests. The role of the local population in border areas is indispensable for maintaining security, fostering economic ties, and ensuring the integrity of the nation. The collaboration between border residents and security forces like the BSF and SSB is crucial in addressing the challenges of infiltration, smuggling, and cross-border insurgency, thereby contributing to the overall stability and development of the region.

Meghalaya an Overview

Map of Meghalaya

Meghalaya, a state nestled in the northeastern part of India, boasts a rich tapestry of landscapes, cultures, and histories. Let's explore its various facets in detail. Meghalaya's formation can be traced back to ancient times, shaped by geological processes and human settlement. Meghalaya became a state on 21st January 1972.

Indigenous Groups:

One of Meghalaya's notable features is its indigenous communities, including the Khasi, Garo, and Jaintia tribes. These indigenous groups have distinct cultures, languages, and traditions, enriching the state's cultural mosaic. Their traditional practices, such as weaving, handicrafts, and agriculture, are integral to Meghalaya's heritage.

INTERNATIONAL BORDERS AND BORDER GUARDING IN MEGHALAYA

Meghalaya, a strategically significant state in the North-Eastern region of India, shares an international boundary with Bangladesh, extending approximately 443 kilometres. This sensitive and expansive border is vigilantly monitored and secured by the Border Security Force (BSF), which serves as the primary line of defence against cross-border challenges. The role of the BSF in this region is of paramount importance, as it actively works to prevent illegal activities such as smuggling, infiltration, and other security threats, thereby ensuring peace and stability.

The international border spans across several key districts of Meghalaya, namely Southwest Garo Hills, West Garo Hills, South Garo Hills, Southwest Khasi Hills, East Khasi Hills, East Jaintia Hills, and Southwest Jaintia Hills. These districts, owing to their geographical proximity to the international boundary, hold immense strategic importance and require continuous vigilance and coordinated security measures.

Through sustained surveillance, effective border management, and community engagement, the BSF plays a vital role in safeguarding national sovereignty. Its dedicated presence not only strengthens security mechanisms but also installs a sense of confidence and safety among the border residents, contributing to the overall stability and harmony of the region.

BORDER WITH OTHER STATES:

Meghalaya shares borders with neighbouring Indian states such as Assam and Manipur. These inter-state borders are managed by respective state authorities and contribute to regional connectivity and trade. Cooperation and coordination between bordering states are essential for ensuring smooth governance and development in border areas.

This positioning endows Tripura with significant geopolitical importance, acting as a gateway for cultural and commercial exchanges between India and Southeast Asia. The state's landscape is predominantly hilly, interspersed with valleys and plains, which contributes to its picturesque scenery and rich biodiversity.

Tripura shares an extensive international border of approximately 856 kilometers with Bangladesh. The key border districts are West Tripura, Sepahijala, Gomati, South Tripura, and North Tripura. These districts are crucial not only for their role in cross-border trade but also for their cultural and social connections with Bangladesh. The border districts serve as conduits for economic activities and cultural interactions, enhancing the bilateral relationship between India and Bangladesh.

BORDER SECURITY AND GUARDING FORCES

The security of Tripura's international border is a matter of significant concern, given its length and the challenges posed by the terrain. The Border Security Force (BSF) is entrusted with the task of guarding the India-Bangladesh border in Tripura. The BSF maintains numerous Border Outposts (BOPs) along the border, equipped with advanced surveillance technology and manned by well-trained personnel. These outposts play a critical role in monitoring and preventing illegal activities such as smuggling, infiltration, and human trafficking, thereby ensuring the integrity and security of the border.

TRADE WITH NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES

Tripura's geographic location makes it a pivotal point for trade between India and Bangladesh. The state has several Integrated Check Posts (ICPs) and Land Customs Stations (LCSs) that facilitate the movement of goods and people between the two countries. The Akhaura ICP near Agartala is one of the most significant trade corridors, handling a substantial volume of bilateral trade. The trade encompasses essential commodities, agricultural products, and manufactured goods, contributing significantly to the economic development of Tripura and strengthening Indo-Bangladesh relations.

STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE OF INTERNATIONAL BORDER RESIDENTS

The residents living along Tripura's international border play a crucial role in maintaining peace and security in the region. Their cooperation with security forces is vital for effective border management. These residents, often the first to detect unusual activities, act as the eyes and ears of the security apparatus, enabling timely intervention and prevention of potential threats. Moreover, the border population significantly contributes to the local economy through their engagement in cross-border trade and commerce.

The cultural ties shared by the border residents with their counterparts in Bangladesh foster mutual respect and understanding, further enhancing bilateral relations. Their role in preserving and promoting cultural heritage is indispensable, making them strategic assets in maintaining regional stability and prosperity.

Tripura, with its unique geographic location and diverse demographic composition, holds substantial strategic importance for India. The state's international border with Bangladesh necessitates robust security measures and active collaboration from border residents. The economic and cultural exchanges facilitated by this border are vital for the development of Tripura and the strengthening of Indo-Bangladesh ties. Agartala, as the state headquarters, continues to lead the state towards progress while preserving its rich cultural heritage.

Training sessions on fodder production technology, paddy growth, and seasonal crop planning expanded farmers' understanding of agronomy, supplemented by the distribution of sesame seeds to encourage diversified cultivation. Participation in the live webcasting of the launch of the PM Dhan Dhanya Krishi Yojana also enabled farmers to connect with national-level agricultural initiatives and policies. Additionally, a focused session on millet cultivation, bean farming, and pesticide usage enriched farmers with contemporary agricultural practices.

A significant addition to these efforts was the livelihood-oriented training programme held on 15th May 2025 at Jorhat for selected farmers from the border districts of Nagaland. This initiative aimed at enhancing skills in tea cultivation and processing, thereby promoting sustainable income generation and entrepreneurship. Guided by experienced resource persons, including Mr. Ankur Gogoi, Professor from Mariani, and an academic expert from the Indian Institute of Management Bangalore, the programme offered both technical and managerial perspectives of the tea industry. Participants were trained in the use and maintenance of tea processing units, traditional hand-rolled tea manufacturing techniques, and post-harvest value addition. The hands-on approach ensured practical learning, empowering farmers to establish micro-enterprises and reduce dependency on external markets.

Collectively, these initiatives have played a pivotal role in fostering self-reliance, strengthening grassroots capacities, and promoting sustainable livelihood opportunities across border regions.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF BORDER STUDIES (NIBS)

Just like a mother protects a child from all adversaries, in a similar manner it is felt that borders of any country are like a mother that protects its citizens and ensures security within its boundaries. In a country like India which shares its boundary with seven other countries and has a varied topography with desert on the western frontier, coastal areas on the southern frontier and hilly terrains on the eastern and northern frontiers, border management is very crucial and essential. Although there are many government agencies which work for the border area management, there are also many nonprofit organizations within India who are doing signal work for the management of border areas. Noteworthy amongst these organizations are Seemanta Chetana Mancha Purvottar (SCMP).

One of this organizations long cherished objective has been the establishment of a Border study institute of National repute for conducting various research and studies of the international borders as well as national borders and helping the government also in taking policy level decisions. With this view in mind a formal step was taken in initiating the formation of a border study center in Guwahati by the name of “National Institute of Border Studies (NIBS)” on 27th November 2022 under the aegis of Seemanta Chetna Mancha Purvottar.

A few broad objectives of the National Institute of Border Studies are:

1. Tracing the origin and history of people residing in border areas.
2. Aiding the government in formulating policies to settle any dispute regarding border demarcation.
3. Studying existing trade practices and infrastructure between countries in the international borders.
4. Analyze the prospects of border trade between countries.
5. Suggesting steps to enhance security and safety of people staying on boarder areas.
6. Explore the possibility of promotion of border tourism.
7. Encouraging cultural exchanges between communities in the border areas.
8. Studying developmental needs of border areas.
9. Assisting in implementation of Act East policy.

Report on the Talk Series on Strategic and Security Concerns in Northeast India:

In a thoughtful and timely initiative, a series of intellectual discourses was conducted by National Institute of Border Studies (NIBS), Guwahati. The first session, held on 27th July 2025 at NEDFi House, GS Road, deliberated upon the pressing theme “Northeast Frontiers: Battling the Drug Menace to Safeguard National Security.” The discussion brought into focus the grave implications of narcotics trafficking along the sensitive frontiers of the Northeast. Eminent speakers, including Dr Partha Pratim Das and Dr Prabhakaran Paleri, enriched the session with their deep insights, the latter joining virtually and drawing from his vast experience in coastal and border security management.

The second talk, conducted on 31st August 2025 at Jetwings Group of Institutions, Navagraha Road, Guwahati, explored the subject “Air Power and Border Management of Northeast India.” This session was graced by the distinguished presence of Air Vice Marshal Sanjib Bordoloi (AVSM, Retd), who lucidly articulated the strategic relevance of air power in surveillance, rapid response, and integrated border management. His address illuminated the evolving dynamics of aerial defence mechanisms and their crucial role in safeguarding the geographically complex and sensitive Northeastern region.

The third and most recent session, held on 14th March 2026 at NEDFi House, GS Road, centered on the theme “Conflict in the Next Door Neighbour: Looking Over Bangladesh with Security Concerns.” This discourse provided a nuanced understanding of the geopolitical developments in Bangladesh and their potential ramifications on India’s Border States. The session stimulated thoughtful engagement among participants, emphasizing the need for vigilant policy frameworks and cooperative regional strategies to address emerging security challenges.

Collectively, these talk series stand as a commendable effort in fostering informed dialogue and national consciousness among stakeholders in the Northeast. By bringing together experts, academicians, and concerned citizens, the initiative has significantly contributed towards a deeper understanding of border security issues and the imperative of a coordinated national response.

The SOUL – Stories of Unity, Land & Culture Docu-Fiction Film Festival 2025 emerges, in retrospect, not merely as an event, but as a profound cultural awakening an initiative that has gracefully woven together the threads of memory, identity, and artistic expression into a living tapestry of Northeast India's civilisational ethos. Rooted in the timeless invocation, 'माता भूमि पुत्रोऽहं पृथिव्या' (The Earth is my mother, and I am her son), the festival reaffirmed a philosophy that transcends geography and speaks to the universal human condition: that our existence is inseparable from the land that nurtures us.

In an era increasingly shaped by rapid modernisation and cultural homogenisation, SOUL 2025 stood as a resolute reminder of the enduring value of indigenous knowledge systems, community rituals, and land-based traditions. It succeeded in capturing not only stories, but the spirit behind those stories the silent yet powerful dialogue between humanity and nature, between heritage and continuity. Through the medium of docu-fiction, the festival elevated lived experiences into narratives of artistic and archival significance, ensuring that the voices of communities often unheard and underrepresented resonate far beyond their immediate landscapes.

The remarkable participation of filmmakers, scholars, students, and community representatives from across the Northeast and beyond reflects the growing recognition of cinema as a vital instrument of cultural preservation. The diversity of submissions and the depth of storytelling presented during the festival underscore the richness of the region's cultural fabric. Each film, each frame, and each narrative contributed to a collective endeavour of safeguarding traditions that might otherwise fade into obscurity.

Equally significant was the spirit of unity and resilience demonstrated during a moment of collective grief. The untimely passing of Shri Zubeen Garg cast a solemn shadow over the festival, yet it also revealed the profound emotional and cultural solidarity of the people of Assam. The dignified response marked by tribute, reflection, and thoughtful rescheduling transformed a moment of loss into one of shared remembrance and strength. In doing so, SOUL 2025 embodied not only cultural celebration but also the emotional depth and unity that define the region.

The festival's impact extends beyond its immediate proceedings. It has catalysed meaningful dialogue between communities, fostered new networks among filmmakers and cultural practitioners, and inspired a renewed commitment to documenting the intangible heritage of the land. By bridging academic inquiry, artistic exploration, and grassroots participation, SOUL has laid the foundation for a sustained cultural movement one that recognises preservation not as a passive act, but as a dynamic and collective responsibility.

Furthermore, the enthusiastic public participation and significant footfall highlight an encouraging shift in societal engagement with cultural narratives. The presence of youth, in particular, signals a promising future wherein the next generation assumes the mantle of cultural stewardship with awareness, pride, and creative vision. This intergenerational continuity is essential to ensuring that traditions are not merely remembered, but lived, adapted, and cherished.

As the inaugural edition draws to a close, SOUL 2025 leaves behind a legacy that is both tangible and intangible. It has created an archive of stories, a platform for voices, and a renewed consciousness of the sacred bond between land and life. More importantly, it has ignited a movement one that aspires to grow, evolve, and deepen its engagement with communities in the years to come.

The organisers, under the aegis of Seemanta Chetana Mancha Purvottar, deserve commendation for envisioning and executing an initiative of such depth and significance. Their commitment to cultural preservation, community empowerment, and national consciousness finds a meaningful expression in SOUL, which now stands poised to become a defining cultural institution in the region.

Looking ahead, the continued success of SOUL will depend upon sustained collaboration, institutional support, and the unwavering participation of communities and creators alike. With each passing year, it holds the promise of expanding its reach, enriching its narratives, and strengthening its role as a custodian of heritage.

In conclusion, SOUL 2025 has not only celebrated stories, it has reaffirmed a worldview. It has reminded us that culture is not static, but alive; that land is not merely territory, but identity; and that stories born from the soil carry within them the wisdom of generations. As long as this spirit endures, the essence of 'माता भूमि पुत्रोऽहं पृथिव्या' (The Earth is my mother, and I am her son) shall continue to guide, inspire, and unite us all.

Thus, SOUL stands as both a culmination and a beginning, a luminous journey towards preserving the soul of the land and its people for generations yet to come.

PANCHA PARIVARTHAN:

The book “Pancha Parivarthan”, launched on 10th December 2025 at NEDFi House, GS Road, Guwahati as part of the celebrations marking 100 years of the RSS journey, presents a comprehensive vision for building a strong, harmonious, and self-reliant society through five key transformative pillars.

It emphasizes social harmony, encouraging people to treat everyone with equality, eliminate discrimination and untouchability, and foster mutual respect, cooperation, and cultural unity among diverse communities.

The second pillar focuses on Swadeshi and self-reliance, advocating the adoption of indigenous products, skills, and knowledge systems while promoting creativity, economic independence, and pride in local traditions, language, and cultural identity.

The book also highlights family strengthening (Kutumb Prabodhan) as the foundation of nation-building. It calls for nurturing value-based, harmonious families with respect for women, shared responsibilities, and regular bonding practices that reinforce cultural and moral values.

Another key aspect is responsible citizenship, urging individuals to follow laws, fulfill civic duties, participate in democratic processes, protect public property, and uphold discipline and national commitment in everyday life.

Finally, it underscores environmental protection, promoting sustainable living through conservation of natural resources, afforestation, reduction of plastic use, water conservation, and increased public awareness for ecological balance.

Pancha Parivarthan serves as a guiding framework for collective progress—uniting individuals, families, and communities towards a disciplined, culturally rooted, and self-reliant nation.
